

DELIVERING BETTER.

Batman has the Batmobile, but Mulch Man is more than happy with a trusty FUSO to get the job done. Managing director Gary Edwards inherited three FUSO trucks when he bought the business four years ago; impressed with their performance, he has since added a new 6x4 Fighter FN2428 to strengthen and diversify his fleet.

Fitted with a 30m³ steel tipper body, the 280hp Fighter has allowed Gary to service a broader customer base.

“A lot of landscapers prefer to lay mulch by hand rather than have it blown in, particularly on smaller jobs,” says Gary. “This truck means I no longer have to say no to those guys.”

With a 4,300mm wheelbase and 23.5T GVM, the Fighter is compact enough to navigate Auckland’s tight residential sites, with enough muscle to carry a full 10T load.

“It’s on springs and drives really well with a full load. I like the nine-speed manual transmission. The cab is comfortable and well laid out – you just get in and go,” says Gary.

With the Fighter now well established, Gary has a reliable and flexible fleet with which to service his growing customer base – and to ensure Mulch Man retains superhero status in the world of bark.
